

Editorial

(PT: 9-11)

Pedro Miguel Alves Ribeiro Correia

CAPP, ISCSP, Universidade de Lisboa

DOI: 10.33167/2184-0644.CPP2021.VIIIN1/pp.12-14

In this first semester of the year 2021, while experiencing new and challenging times, whilst Director and Chief Editor of the Public Sciences & Policies magazine, I gladly embrace in the institutional sense, the task of presenting another regular edition of the CAPP magazine to the scientific community.

As a result of the internationalization of Public Sciences & Policies magazine, this edition includes, new national and international articles, fomenting different perspectives about knowledge. While preserving the commitment with the magazine's international dimension, we underline that all the available articles included were, as usual, translated into English.

While also respecting the multidisciplinary, that characterizes Public Sciences & Policies magazine, this edition broaches different areas of knowledge with different methodologies applied, including a set of subjects as diverse and as relevant for the social sciences, such as public health policies, judicial power, accounting knowledge, the electronic and digital government, quality of life and well-being at work and even, cyber and information security.

In the first instance, this edition counts on the article of Jarbas Ricardo Almeida Cunha and Ana Claudia Farranha entitled Judicialization of Health in Brazil: Categorization of the decision-making stages of the Supreme Federal Court and the impacts on the Unified Health System, that analyses the judicial decision-making process on public health policy in Brazil by the highest court – the Supreme Federal Court (STF).

Secondly, João Bilhim and Andréa Gonçalves present their work entitled Epistemological Approaches and Pluralism in Accounting Research: beyond the dominant paradigm, promoting a reflection on the dominant theoretical paradigm in research in accounting and highlighting the importance of alternative approaches.

In the third article, authored by Ricardo Dias and Marco Gomes, the models and strategies of Transformational Government from the article Electronic Government to Digital Governance: Models and Strategies of Transformational Government are brought to discussion.

The article “Without work I am nothing, I do not have an identity”: a qualitative study in a Public Brazilian organization, written by Francisco António Coelho Júnior, Pedro Marques-Quinteiro, Cristiane Faiad, Tânia Gomes Figueira, António Paulo Pinheiro Lima and Liziane Castilhos de Oliveira Freitas, broaches a very current issue, mainly in these times of global pandemic: mental health in the workplace.

In the area of cyber-security, Bruno Garcia, with the article Information and Security in Cyberspace: The influence of globalization in the intensification of risks and threats over the last decade presents a brief history of security of the information underlining the threats to cybernetic security and how these are influenced by globalization.

Subsequently, and similarly to the announced in the Editorial No. 2 of the volume V of Public Sciences & Policies magazine (Coreia, 2019), it is a privilege to be able to announce, for the third consecutive year, as a result of the international partnership between the Centre for Public Administration and Public Policies and the Meeting on the Administration of Justice – EnAJUS (an event promoted and organized by the CAPP together with the University of Brazil – UnB and with the Brazilian Institute for Social Studies and Research – IBEPES), a meeting that due to the current conditions of the pandemic, was performed online between from September 24-30, 2020, the publication of the three articles distinguished by the organizers as the best of the event, and that for this very reason won the possibility to be published, in the fast-track variant, in the CAPP magazine.

The first of these articles is a theoretical essay, by Clarissa Rocha da Silva Salazar, entitled Seeking an Efficient Management for the Judiciary; An Agenda under Construction?

This is followed by the article of Júlia Cassia dos Santos Silvério, Luma de Araújo Costa Batista, André Luiz Marques Serrano, Pedro Paulo Murce Meneses, Nara Cristina Ferreira Mendes, Paulo Augusto Pettenuzzo de Britto entitled Construction of a central bank of finalistic deliveries for electoral justice.

And lastly, completing the trio of the awarded articles, the article authored by Luciana Godri and Carolina Wunsch Marcelino, entitled Institutional Clashes Beyond Health Judicialization, Impositions of Powers in the Case of Cancer Pills.

The wish of the editorial team is that these articles may inspire the researchers' projects, incite the curiosity and academic debate and stimulate the creation of scientific knowledge.

I finish up this editorial, as usual, by thanking those that contribute most for the growth of Public Sciences & Policies magazine. In the first place, I congratulate the new ISCSP presidency, headed by the Dr. Ricardo Ramos Pinto, and in the name of the editorial council of Public Sciences & Policies magazine, I wish a lot of success during this journey of great responsibility. With regard to the role of the CAPP magazine, we will do everything to contribute for this institution's journey pursuing prosperity, solid growth and sustenance.

Another fundamental figure of this project is the president of CAPP, Dr. Miguel Pereira Lopes, to whom I want to say a special thank-you for all the support provided during the first two years of a four-year term.

Lastly, I thank the central figures, without whom this whole dynamic of scientific publication would be irreversible: to the revisers that efficiently collaborate with us, and, of course, to the authors of this issue. We are grateful for all the confidence and we expect to return to count on them in subsequent volumes.

References

Correia, P. M. A. R. (2019). Editorial. Public Sciences & Policies, 5(2), 9-12. DOI:10.33167/2184-0644.CPP2019.VVN2/pp.9-12

